

We Know

SEYCHELLES

Seychelles is an unspoiled tropical paradise with palm-fringed beaches and warm crystal-clear seas. The islands lie in the western Indian Ocean, about 500 miles northeast of Madagascar and roughly 1000 miles east of Mombasa, Kenya. About a third of the 115 islands, including Mahe and Praslin, are made of granite, the only mid-oceanic group of granite islands in the world, and the remainder coral.

Useful Information

Whether you come to dive among hundreds of species of fish in the island waters, marvel at flocks of colorful birds flitting among rare jungle trees, soak up the equatorial sun on silver sands, the Seychelles archipelago will impress as being just about as close to paradise as it is possible to get on earth.

CLIMATE

The main islands of Mahe, Praslin and La Digue lie only a few degrees south of the equator, but because they are so far out in the ocean, weather patterns can be variable. There are two monsoons. The south-east monsoon from May to October is strong, cool and dry, bringing with it overcast skies and choppy seas. The north-west from December to March is calmer though hotter and rainy. The best time to visit the islands is from May to October.

CURRENCY & CREDIT CARDS

The Seychelles currency is the Rupee (SCR). The country's foreign exchange regulations require visitors to pay for all services provided by hotels, guesthouses and self-catering enterprises, as well as things like rental cars, entrance fees to parks and reserves, scuba diving and boat charter, in major foreign currency notes or by credit card. Taxis and restaurant bills are payable in foreign currency or Seychelles Rupees. Rupees can only be used in local shops, markets, and bars. Exchanging a moderate amount of money at the airport upon arrival is recommended. Money can be exchanged at banks and the airport on Mahé, or at hotels. Check with your bank for any fees you may be charged. NOTE: If carrying cash, take only recently minted U.S. currency.

Credit cards are widely accepted. ATMs are available at major banks in the three main inhabited islands of Mahé, Praslin and La Digue.

BANKING

In general, banks are open 8:30am - 2:30pm Monday to Friday and 8:30am to 11:00am on Saturday. Several banks are located outside the arrivals area at the International Airport and are open to meet all incoming and departing flights.
